These firms stand as anomalous entries. The reason being that the contracting data does not match up across multiple databases, calling into question the dollar amounts that were actually awarded to these firms. The ASBL suspects the government may have falsely inflated the award amounts in order to inflate the dollar totals to make it appear the government is conducting more business with small firms than it actually is. The ASBL believes that these award dollars were awarded improperly and thus did not actually go to legitimate small businesses, even though they were counted towards the government's 23 percent small business goal and on the SBA's FY 2010 scorecard. This is why the dollar amounts were included in the total as not having gone to small businesses.
